

Marching for justice

Rev. James Clanton, above, of First Baptist Church New Hill, was among a contingent of New Hill residents who marched Saturday in the fourth annual Historic Thousands on Jones Street rally in Raleigh. Participants marched for a variety of civil rights issues. New Hill residents were protesting the planned construction of a regional sewage facility in the heart of their community. The Western Wake Partners, which includes Apex, Cary, Morrisville and Holly Springs, decided to build the sewage plant in the vicinity of two churches and numerous homes.

