New Hill's case

Regarding the June 3 article "New Hill loses sewage plant ruling":

The ruling by Superior Court Judge Robert Hobgood in the New Hill sewer plant-siting case is a joke. Anyone can see that New Hill has a valid case [against the planned plant].

Last month, Judge Hobgood dismissed a case against Dell when taxpayers charged incentives the computer company received from the state were unconstitutional. Hobgood ruled, in part, that the taxpayers lacked legal standing. It seems he uses this argument to rule in favor of big money without looking at the merits of the case. If taxpayers don't have legal standing, who does?

This fight is far from over. Hopefully voters outside of New Hill will become more aware of the issue and help us find justice.
